

Writing

Simple Sentences

In English, every simple sentence must have at least a subject and a verb. Such a sentence is called a 'simple sentence'. Who or what the sentence speaks about is called the subject. What the sentence says about the subject is called the verb. In the following sentences, the subject is underlined once and the verb twice.

Mahan is sleeping.

